

12 August 2008 – TAINAN, TAIWAN – For the next two days, the KHGS International Summer Camp students sat in on KHGS classes and ate lunch with KHGS students, exchanging culture, emails, and different phrases in English and Chinese. The campers also learned the art of Chinese calligraphy and were able to use the special brushes to design personalized fans. Additionally, the students were introduced to Chinese painting. Both days finished off with the final Qigong practices, where the campers fine-tuned their skills.

A camper eagerly listening to the teacher in a KHGS classroom

Student-made fan using Chinese calligraphy brush

Students cool off during a break in the Qigong practice

The students pose with the instructors in the final Qigong practice session