

Windy Day down South

Inside this issue:

| | |
|-------------|---|
| Highlight | 1 |
| What we did | 2 |
| Interview | 2 |

Highlight: The Winds

We all stepped out of the bus and headed up-hills. Kenting National Park has a view of the coast from up high along with strong winds powerful enough to push you back. In fact, the winds feels like skydiving once you raised your arms high. Many of the students crashed into each other as the wind was so strong that it practically blew us away. Also, a lot of the girls' hair got all over the place as the powerful wind blows against us. It's difficult enough getting up with the high winds against you, but the ocean breeze feels like a reward. The stone steps were slightly slippery. After going down, everyone headed over to the nearby stores.

Hurling winds slapped everyone silly. Taken at Kenting National Park.

Special points of interest:

- Cultural Dancing of the Natives
- The HUGE winds
- Kenting National Park
- Many people fell asleep~~~ (I don't know how that is a special point, but I'm filling up space!!)

Glamorous ocean of Kenting National Park

Enjoying the winds.

What we did

The wind roared mercilessly, swirling all around us violently. We were at the National Park. There, we saw the amazing stone naturally shaped like a cat (by the way it did not look like a cat, it looked like a dog).

The wind was blowing so hard that all of us almost fell over. :O We all bought swimming caps for 50nt each so we could go to the hot spring/jacuzzi later in the hotel. After escaping from the BIG roaring wind, we went to see the beautiful lighthouse up on the hill. Taking a few memorable pictures with the lighthouse, we headed for lunch at the Caesar Park Hotel. While the rest of us ate, Vanessa watched us chomping on seafood (she is allergic to seafood and many other food). After eating the delicious food, we head to the medicine shop for the people who had motion sickness, people who just wanted medicine, or people who wanted to get fresh air. Riding on the road for 45mins on the bumpy road, we stopped for a restroom break. Some people who didn't use the restroom break properly were rushing to the arcade to playing games while others waited patiently. After that, we rode on the bus for a long time. There were many bumps that kept on making people unable to sleep. Though most of the people hated the bumpiness, Karen and Janeva liked the bumpiness. Some of us looked out the window to enjoy the beautiful view of the ocean waves crashing on the shore. :D We were thirty minutes away from our destination when we made another pit stop at a small store where they sold dried goods and had restrooms. None of us used the restroom, though, since all the stalls had the squatting kind of toilet. Plus, they had no toilet paper! :O After that, we made a short thirty minute trip to the hotel and hurried to write this article for this newsletter. Then we watched the traditional culture dance at the hotel! The costumes were pretty cool.

The Southernmost light house in Taiwan~~

Us on a rock!!!

The men and the women doing a traditional dance at the hotel.

*"Serious headaches.
(from the winds)"*

Interview~ How was the cultural dance?

Belinda: It was pretty good actually~ I was kinda into it and was like dancing along (you can ask Janeva about it) Oh! And the guys were really cutee >w< so were the girls but... yea, go guys~!